JOAQUIN MILLER

DR. J. M. PRUETT SPEAKS OF

THE ECCENTRIC POET.

Miller Curls Up in Bed With His Boots on and Excuses Himself When Ladies Call to Pay Their Respects-Cabin of the Poet is a Type of the Frontier Cabin and His Funeral Pyre Stands Near.

Dr. J. M. Pruett, who for years was resident and practicing physician of this city, but who is now a resident of Oakiand, Cal., tells interesting stories of Joaquin Miller, the "Poet of the Sierras," near whose home Dr. Pruett lives in Oakland.

"Owing to the world-wide fame of the poet," said Dr. Pruett to the East Oregonian, while on a visit to the city recently, "strangers from all parts of the United States call upon him every day. People of the highest literary tastes, and standing, refined, educated and erudite, all expecting to find the poet in a sumptuous study surrounded by the wealth of art and refinement.

"Imagine their surprise to find Miller curied up in hed in the front room of his cabin, with his boots and clothes on, at all times of the

"'I am not sick, ladles,' the poet will say in excuse for being in bed; 'but I am tired and can't afford to pull off my boots between visits, so I just keep them on. Come in and sit down, and excuse me while I put on a coat,' he will smilingly say, as he pushes a rough stool toward his A wire cable being stretched for visitors and vanishes into the only other room in the cabin, to complete

STARTING A SAWMILL.

Operate a Mill on Upper McKay.

H. N. Robinson, formerly proprietor of the Pendleton Business college in this city, and W. L. Rhodes, have made arrangements to start a new sawmill in about two weeks, on Mr. Rhodes' land three miles above the forks of McKay Creek and 20 miles south of Pendleton.

The capacity of the mill will be about 10,000 feet per day and it will employ about 10 men after it is in running order.

Mr. Rhodes owns a large amount and 39 years. He had lived in the Willamette valley 58 years, excepting there is enough timber in the vicinity 1848-60, which were spent in Califortor un for three years. to run for three years.

It will be a custom mill, strictly, those having logs to cut to do their own logging, the mill to saw them at a given price per 1000, the price to be governed by the kind of lumber desired.

It will be a steam mill, complete throughout and has been long needed in that community.

Mr. Robinson has just moved down from Meacham to the mill site and will have charge of the engine.
